“ My children's grandmother on their father's side passed recently. Even though my children never had the privilege of getting to know her I'd like to share some memories.

She was a strong woman with a very deep heart. A mother to many and not just her own. She told me stories of cooking to feed the hungry workers building the train tracks through Durham. I ate my first chicken feet with her and loved them! Nobody's collards greens have ever compared to hers. She would break every dish if you pushed her too far or touched her food when it was cooking. I learned a lot from her about being a strong woman and keeping your shoulders back in times of struggle. She was a devout Christian and exhaled her beliefs to others often. She loved the dip I think because she enjoyed its sweet taste. I remember her most in a white uniform pressed and sharply creased leaving for church to serve.
